

How do I set up the learning environment for handwriting?

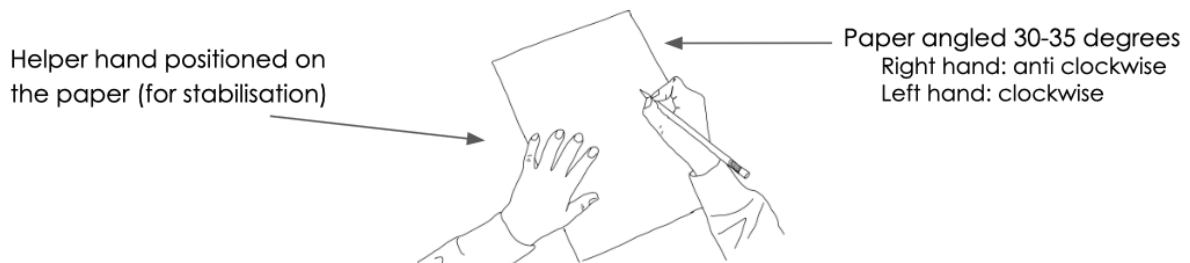

A silent (as possible) environment helps all learners to direct their attention to the task at hand. It is imperative all students are seated at desks with chairs that can support their back. Along with letter formation, handwriting instruction involves teaching students explicitly what their body should be doing when they write. In the first years of school, we are establishing correct:

- posture and feet position
- paper placement
- pencil grip

Posture and feet position

Paper placement

Pencil grip

